

SUSTAINABLE AGRICULTURE AND SOCIAL JUSTICE:
Cultivating Peace, One Garden at a Time
With Kiado Cruz, Community Organizer
RASA (Autonomous Network for Food Sovereignty), Oaxaca, Mexico

Friday, October 29, 2010

Community meal at 6 pm

Presentation at 7 pm

The Waysmeet Center, 15 Mill Rd, Durham NH
(across from "C" parking lot)

Parking in "C" lot and downtown Durham

Kiado Cruz is a Community Organizer for RASA (La Red Autónoma por la Soberanía Alimentaria: The Autonomous Network for Food Sovereignty). RASA is an ever-increasing, citywide network of people who are learning, then teaching, urban gardening, while rediscovering their cultural food roots.

Señor Cruz will speak on sustainable agriculture as well as the community organizing that has been instrumental in the current autonomous movements in Oaxaca and Chiapas. He will also address questions about the effects of U.S. trade policies and increasing privatization that have been damaging to Mexico, and about related migration issues.

Come join this cross-borders dialogue between those who are creating and supporting local food systems and local economies, engaging in education reform, advocating for immigration reform, and promoting fair and just international trade!

Free and open to the public, though donations much appreciated!

For more information: 603-862-1165 or waysmeet@comcast.net

Sponsored by Witness for Peace New England, American Friends Service Committee – NH, The United Campus Ministry to UNH, Greater Seacoast Permaculture Group, Seacoast Peace Response and more to come...

